Conference Guidelines

- Sessions are 85 minutes long. Do not wait for a crowd to form. Start promptly!
- Reserve at least 15-20 minutes for open discussion.
- Panelists have 12–15 minutes depending on size of panel. If a panel has five papers, each presenter has 12 minutes. If a panel has three or four papers, each presenter has 15 minutes. It is best to plan on 12 minutes regardless of the size of your panel since last-minute changes could affect your allotted time. Reading of papers is not acceptable.
- Moderators are responsible for introductions, keeping the time, and alerting presenters of remaining minutes, as well as managing the open discussion period. Each room contains one-minute and five-minute “warning” signs that moderators may use to alert presenters time limits. Moderators are not discussants. However, each moderator is responsible for making a brief introduction (one minute) of each paper. IMPORTANT: Please do not reorder the sequence of papers as they are listed in the program. Conference participants often plan their attendance of a session based on the order of the papers.
- If a moderator does not arrive, we ask that the first presenter take on this role.

Some Definitions

Colloquy—Formal discussion of an issue. Presenters make prepared comments and engage in an open discussion with the audience. They do not present written papers.

Panel—Formal exploration of an issue through the presentation of papers followed by open discussion by presenters and the audience.

Roundtable—Informal discussion of an issue over breakfast. Open to anyone who wishes to join in and share his or her views.

UAA 2011 Activist Scholar Activities

Marilyn Jacobs Gittell was an outstanding scholar and a community urban activist who wrote seminal works on citizen participation, was founding editor of Urban Affairs Quarterly, (now known as Urban Affairs Review, one of the leading academic journals in the field of urban research), and was an impassioned participant in one of the most controversial social experiments of her time (NYC school decentralization). She was deeply committed to training young urban scholars of color and women, and taught them to understand the workings of democracy from the ground up, using the methods of rigorous field research. In recognition of Marilyn's legacy, and to encourage ongoing activist scholarship, UAA and SAGE are sponsoring a set of activities during the New Orleans conference.

Thursday, March 17

Activist Scholar Gathering, hosted by Miller-McCune Center for Research, Media, and Public Policy

5:30 PM–6:30 PM, Southdown Room (4th Floor)

Fast-changing cities need smart urban scholars who can help put cities back at the top of the nation's intellectual and policy agenda. Miller-McCune (the print and online magazine), as well as SAGE Publications, together with a group of urban scholars and activists have been working to build a network of researchers and activists interested in advancing cutting edge research on under-explored urban problems. The goal is to promote research that can help us understand urban problems and discover implementation plans that are practice-focused to address these issues. Interested? On Thursday, March 17th, from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. there will be an informal organizing meeting for the network at the UAA conference in New Orleans.

Friday, March 18

Her areas of expertise include local and regional economic development, community development and urban revitalization.

Nelson's current research focuses on how cities cope with population decline, whether sudden or prolonged, sustained or temporary, and the tensions among equity, efficiency and environmental management in the implementation of redevelopment strategies.

Her recent work on New Orleans addresses planning and policy interventions to deal with vacant and abandoned property and the difficulties city officials have faced in translating the desire for a safer, better city into policies that could direct a just redevelopment.

Active in local, national and international organizations, Nelson is member of the Association of Collegiate Schools of Planning, the national and Louisiana chapters of the American Planning Association (APA), the American Institute of Certified Planners (AICP), the Neighborhood Housing Services of New Orleans Board of Directors, the Planners Network Steering Committee, the Urban Affairs Association Board Governing Board and the Urban Conservancy Board of Directors.

Film Screenings with Discussions

Land of Opportunity: Excerpts from a Multi-Platform Documentary Project About Rebuilding New Orleans and Urban America

Thursday, 1:30 PM–2:55 PM, Southdown (4th Floor)

From front porches to the frontlines, LAND OF OPPORTUNITY captures the struggle to rebuild New Orleans, one of America's most beloved and emblematic cities. Juxtaposing different perspectives, from urban planners to immigrant workers to public housing residents, this multiplatform documentary project reveals how the story of post-Katrina New Orleans is also the story of urban America. The story of how democratic processes can fail us, how economic crisis can pull the rug out from under us, and how migration and displacement can prove to be complicated bargains. This is a ground-level view of a situation that has been widely discussed but rarely seen with such texture and complexity. Encompassing 1500 hours of footage filmed over five years, our multi-platform elements include a feature-length film for broadcast, as well as interactive and web-based content for educators and organizers alike.

As cities all over the world struggle to recover from disaster, whether economic, natural or man-made, we believe that the lessons of post-Katrina New Orleans have only become more urgent. While New Orleans is justly celebrated for its uniqueness, LAND OF OPPORTUNITY focuses on how this city is actually not different from cities across our country, especially when viewed through the lens of race, class, economics and the environment. The long-term goal for our outreach and audience engagement strategy is to use this project as a tool to raise awareness and inspire action around the "urban agenda" affecting cities across our country. We want to utilize the diverse stories of post-Katrina New Orleans to galvanize and educate urban America around the interconnected issues of affordable housing, urban redevelopment/planning, immigration reform and economic displacement. We aim to inspire nuanced discussions and support the work of organizations that cut across single-issue frameworks to build broad-based and multi-racial movement for urban spatial justice.

Coming Home: The Dry Storm—Katrina swept away the levees; the government bulldozed their homes. In the aftermath, residents fight for their human right to housing.

Thursday, 3:15 PM–4:40 PM, Southdown (4th Floor)

"It just hurts my heart," says Sam Jackson, New Orleans public housing resident and organizer, standing before the rubble that bulldozers had made of his family's home. After Katrina's destruction, the New Orleans City Council voted to demolish the majority of the city's public housing and replace it with privately owned developments, displacing thousands of people. Locked out of the City Council meetings where policymakers decided the fate of their community, residents become activists, taking their struggle to the highest levels of national and international leadership. By taking an intimate look at one community's battle with the housing crisis, Coming Home: The Dry Storm speaks to a broader pattern of privatization of those public resources that satisfy human rights for us all. With Obama and the Department of Housing and Urban Development pushing to privatize and mortgage finance the nation's public housing stock in 2011, Coming Home couldn't be more relevant today.

Call for Participation

42nd Annual Meeting of the Urban Affairs Association
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania                      April 18—21, 2012

Rethinking the Future of Urbanism: Cities and Regions in a Post-Industrial Era

Pittsburgh transformed itself into the quintessential post-industrial city, but what does it mean for a city to be post-industrial? How have some urbanized areas like Pittsburgh and its surrounding region adapted to economic, demographic, political, environmental, and social changes over time, whereas others have struggled? Which challenges and opportunities do post-industrial urban areas face and how do they compare to other places? To better understand post-industrial urbanism, the conference will address causes and consequences of population shifts, growing social and economic inequalities, the environmental impacts from industrial and post-industrial economies, and changes in political relationships. The conference presents an opportunity for scholars to consider the origins and effects of increased innovation and social, economic, and cultural diversity in post-industrial cities and other urban areas in the United States and beyond.

The following kinds of questions help us explore the past, present, and future of post-industrial cities and regions:

- What is the future economic role of post-industrial urban areas?
- What is the impact of the financial crisis on post-industrial cities?
- Which roles will post-industrial cities play in state and national politics and policy in the future?
- What are the impacts of post-industrial urbanism on people and places within a region?
- How will the emerging global climate change crisis affect the future of cities?
- What does urban sustainability mean and is it possible?
- Finally, how have the economic, political, technological, and social forces in post-industrial cities transformed the meaning of community in urban areas?

Meeting in Pittsburgh, a city that has redefined itself, affords us the opportunity to use local, regional, state, national, and global perspectives to examine where cities have been, where they are now, and where they are going.

In keeping with the tradition of UAA Annual Meetings, we encourage proposals that focus on the conference theme as well as submissions on the array of research topics typically found at UAA conferences:
